THE FRANKLIN TYPEWRITER

Admired by Educated and Influential Men.

When such men as Ben Harrison, editorial writer of the Times-Union and Citizen, of Jacksonville, Fla., and John N. Rogers, County Superintendent of the Board of Education, of Sandersville, Ga., do voluntarily declare the Franklin to be the most practical and durable of all standard machines, and that they would use no other, then it must have superior qualities. The writing is visible without lifting the carriage. The mechanism is so simple that a child can learn it. No trust combine controls the price. Therefore you can buy it for $75, on terms to suit your pocketbook.

Good second-hand Franklins for $25, and upwards. Your inquiries by mail, or in person, will receive courteous and prompt attention.

BY THE BREAKERS

Who would not love to stand and gaze
Upon the grand old ocean's face?
Scan o'er the azure, misty maze
Of glorious breakers' matchless grace.
In wayward strife, an endless throng,
The crested billows sweep along.

From isles afar, the soft wind blows,
Filled with the great sea's ozone;
The sun with lingering beauty woe
The fleecy sea foam shoreward thrown,
In wreaths, and mazes, on the beach,
Wrapped in a flood of silvery speech.

Ah, radiant shore, ah, restless sea!
Of sparkling waves so full of cheer,
That fills the heart with ecstasy,
And breathes of love's celestial sphere.
Released from care, the soul mounts high.
In harmony with sea and sky.

The Commandry Instituted.

Daytona Now Has Members in the Highest Degree of York Masonry.

During the week the city has been in the hands of the Knights Templars. The cause of all the commotion was the institution of Oriental Commandry Knights Templar.

Tuesday the visiting Sir Knights were arriving from Jacksonville, DeLand, Orlando, Palatka and various parts of the state. Tuesday evening a preliminary meeting was held to prepare for the coming convocation. At this meeting the Commandry was opened by Eminent Sir Knight W. H. Jewell, of Orlando, Past Grand Commander of Florida, and the Sir Knights were instructed in Tactics and the Esoteric work.

The first formal meeting was held Wednesday afternoon, Oriental Commandry was opened and organized, and Eminent Commander C. L. Smith was received in full form. The order of the Temple was closed and the Commandry opened in the Red Cross with Eminent Sir Knight S. B. Wright as Sovereign Master, and the order of the Red Cross was conferred upon fourteen candidates; the same evening the order of Sir Knight was conferred upon the same candidates, Eminent Sir Knight James Carnell acting as Eminent Commander.

Meetings were also held Thursday afternoon and evening, and the orders were conferred upon four candidates.

Rt. Eminent Sir W. P. Webster, Past Grand Commander, as Sovereign Master in the Red Cross, and Rt. Eminent Sir W. S. Ware, Grand Commander of Florida, as Eminent Commander in the Temple.

The "Breakers" was the headquarters of the Grand Commandry and visiting Sir Knights, and the hospitable Daytona House took care of the visiting candidates from afar. The visitors were entertained by the local members taking them around our beautiful city in the automobiles, and by a banquet at the Daytona House Thursday evening. The local Commandry feel under great obligations to the visiting Grand Commandry officers and Sir Knights for their valuable assistance in helping to institute Oriental Commandry, U. D.

The H. R. Y. C. showed their hospitality by throwing open the doors of the club house, and many pleasant minutes were passed by the visitors in the home of the club.

The following officers of the Grand Commandry were present:

To Get Rid of Mosquitoes

For centuries mankind has endured the mosquito—not willingly, but because there seemed no help for it. This little pest has made human life a burden, says the Rural New Yorker, and has also been the means of spreading malaria, yellow fever and probably other diseases. We failed to fight the mosquito successfully because the warfare was conducted against single adults. They were screened out of the house with partial success, and now and then one was caught in his bloody act and killed. This process proved about as effective as the plan of emptying the ocean with a tablespoon. Now the fight against this pest has been changed from individual combat to wholesale slaughter. The scientific men have shown us how to destroy the baby mosquitoes. Their quiet study of its habits has been more effective than all the groans, sobs and bad language which the practical men have indulged in. The insects breed in still, fresh water. They will not breed in running streams or in salt water. If all the little pools and stagnant ponds in a neighborhood can be drained the mosquito crop will surely fail from drought. Where this drainage is impossible a thin film of kerosene oil over the surface of the water will put an end to the "wrigglers." Of course this plan requires the co-operation of neighbors in order to make it effective—for that matter so does every effort against pests which injure us, be they mosquitoes or men. By taking care of all water holes or stagnant places on our premises we may do much good, but this work of fighting mosquitoes is a public service in which all should take a hand. The so-called "board of health" to be found in most communities might just as well enforce sanitary laws against the mosquito as to quarantine patients who suffer from contagious diseases. It is reported that the city of Winchester, Va., has been made nearly "mosquito proof" by the enforcement of an ordinance requiring people to use kerosene in all vaults and sinks. Formerly the insects were so bad that guests were driven away. On Long Island an area containing twenty-five square miles has been examined by an engineer and every stagnant pool or pond will be drained or oiled. These things show that people are moving against the mosquito, and it is high time they did so. Science shows how the work may be done, and now provides a motive for doing it by providing that this winged and spurred enemy is responsible for spreading disease.
